A Great Project.

Bill Williams fork of the Colorado river, which is the dividing line between Yuma and Mohave counties, is to be the scene of another vast irrigation enterprise, the preliminary surveys having already been made. The project contemplates the construction of an immense dam across Bill Williams fork at a point below a great box canyon. The water above the dam can then be conveyed by means of a tunnel over an immense tract of rich agricultural land by gravity, and it is also intended to furnish an endless water supply for extensive placer mining operations in the Harcuvar district. These placers have been known and worked for many years by dry washing. In fact there is little doubt that their workings were carried on by aboriginal miners, probably the Aztecs, hundreds of years ago. With a plentiful supply of water these placers will undoubtedly give up millions in the future to where they have yielded dollars under the crude dry washing process, as they are very rich and cover a large area.—Yuma Sentinel.

All for Arizona.

The Indian appropriation bill, which was passed by the senate, contains the following items of interest to Arizona:

For the purchase of supplies necessary to the support of the Hualpai Indians in Mohave and Coconino counties, $5,000.

For the temporary employment and support of the Pima agency in Pima county, $40,000.

The above amount is to be expended for the benefit of the Indians in such a manner as may be prescribed by the secretary of the interior.

For the purchase of the right, title and improvements of certain settlers within the exterior boundaries of the Navajo reservation in Coconino county, $48,000.

Plenty of Water.

The Schevelon Irrigation Company have completed their ditch from Schevelon creek to Krentz & Wolff's ranch, a distance of fourteen miles. At present there is plenty of water to irrigate hundreds of acres of land, and as this creek was never known to be dry the chances are there will always be a good flow. The matter of irrigation in this valley is only a question of hard work and considerable money.—Winslow Mail.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

The Plans for the Next Summer Session of that Institution—To Include Eminent Instructors.

More students spent last summer at the University of California than at the summer session of any other American university except at Harvard. The 797 students were brought together by a desire to study under some of the foremost scholars of America, men from the universities of California, Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Chicago and Stanford; by the charm of a Pacific summer, for Berkeley is one of the coolest and most delightful of mid-summer abiding places, and by the manifold interest of San Francisco, which is only fifty minutes distant, with a ten-cent fare.

The plans for the next summer session of the University of California, from June 26 to August 6, 1902, provide for instruction in twenty-two departments—philosophy, education, history and political science, political economy, Greek, Latin, English, German, French, Spanish, Italian, art, library science, mathematics, physics, chemistry, botany, mineralogy, agriculture, forestry, irrigation and physical culture.

Besides a number of men from the permanent faculty, among whom will be Professors George Holmes Howison, Edward J. Wickson, Hugo Carl Schilling, Carl Copping Plehn, Leon J. Richardson (Dean), Percival Lewis, Kendrick C. Babcock and Chauncey Wetmore Wells, the summer faculty will include Josiah Royce, professor of the history of philosophy at Harvard; Henry Morse Stephens, who has just resigned the chair of modern European history at Cornell to become professor of history and director of university extension in the University of California; B. E. Fernow, long in charge of the forestry work of the United States government, and now director of the New York State College of Forestry; Superintendent F. Louis Soldan of St. Louis; William A. Henry, dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin; J. Mark Baldwin of Princeton, editor of the new Dictionary of Philosophy and Psychology; Robert A. Harper, professor of botany in the University of Wisconsin; F. N. Scott of Michigan and Charles Sears Baldwin of Yale for English composition; Arthur Lachman, dean of the College of Science and Engineering of the University of Oregon, for chemistry, and Ernest George Merritt of Cornell, for physics, and a number of special lecturers.

Men and women are admitted to exactly equal privileges. Qualified persons may enroll for the summer session without examination. Credit toward a degree will be given for satisfactory work. The full resources of libraries, museums, laboratories, gymnasiums and other athletic equipments will be available for the summer students.

Liberally reduced rates have been offered by the railroads to attendants from all parts of the country.

Prospective students should file their applications before June 16. If a request is sent to the recorder of the faculties, Berkeley, California, full information will be forwarded concerning courses, living accommodations, railroad rates and similar matters.
